A national, open access Learning and Teaching Induction Program for staff new to teaching

In 2016, the Office for Learning and Teaching awarded me a National Learning and Teaching Fellowship. In collaboration with nine Australian partner universities, I led the Fellowship program of activities to develop:

- a highly successfully, free, fully online teaching induction MOOC for higher education colleagues new to teaching (Contemporary Approaches to University Teaching);
- teaching induction resources; and
- two publications (one under review and one under development).

The MOOC content is offered under a _Creative Commons Attribution Share Alike license_. The content of the MOOC is therefore available to universities to import into their own learning management systems. The How to Import MOOC Content link provides information on how to do this. Different universities are using the Contemporary Approaches to University Teaching MOOC in different ways. These are captured in the link How universities are using the MOOC.

Below are the products of and acknowledgements about this Fellowship. I hope that you find the products useful and the acknowledgements informative.

Associate Professor Kym Fraser | kfraser@swin.edu.au

Swinburne University of Technology, 21 May 2018

Fellowship website content

MOOC content map

Rationale for the Fellowship

Acknowledgements

How Universities are using the MOOC

MOOC Information Flyer

Teaching Induction References

Annotated Bibliography

How to Import MOOC Content

Fellowship Report coming soon

Publications

Fellowship Partners, Evaluator & Critical Friend

MOOC Content Developers

MOOC Reviewers

Fellowship Reference Group